Boost your performance, reduce costs — reap the savings

Eager to improve workplace health and safety and boost your bottom line? Try the new business planning tool kit at WorkSafeBC.com. It can help you reduce injury costs in three ways. First, you can identify areas for improvement by comparing your performance with others in your industry. Then, you'll see the types of injuries and claims that are driving your claim costs, and be able to focus your efforts accordingly. Finally, you can analyze your claims history and project how much you can reduce costs and improve your experience rating over time. The site is available via the employer portal, using your user ID and password.

Clearance letters go mobile

Clearance letters will soon be at your fingertips — a real benefit to industries such as forestry and construction. The new mobile clearance letter app allows you to quickly set up a profile on your device and request a clearance letter on any company to ensure that company is registered and paying its assessments. WORKING TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Portal offers a closer look at protecting new workers

It's no surprise: young and inexperienced workers are more vulnerable to getting injured — particularly in the high-risk trades. So why not instill the importance of workplace health and safety from the start? That's the idea behind a new WorkSafeBC apprenticeship portal, aimed at employers, educators, and apprentices. The site is well-organized, easy to navigate, and contains all the information you'll need to protect your beginning employees. For more, visit www2.worksafebc.com/Topics/Apprenticeships/Home.asp.
