Dear Ms. Burch,

I am writing to support the COCA position on the proposed changes to the Occupational Health & Safety Regulation, including the Draft on Traffic Control.

Traffic control is an important part of construction. Most traffic control situations are lower level, short duration. There should be a recognition of the lower level hazard and there should be a requirement that the employer train those workers who do this type of traffic control.

We suggest that the most suitable wording would be to require that the worker be trained in a course acceptable to the Board. This would be in line with other training requirements throughout the Occupational Health & Safety Regulation.

Yours truly,
